Introduction:

St. Patrick’s Graveyard Inscriptions are presented with the names in alphabetical order. The numbers refer to the position of each tombstone on the map (by Anne O’Dwyer). The map is presented between the inscriptions and the index, the latter shows the names as numbered on the map. Sketches of many headstone, done by Rita Harte are given at the end.

For this listing the graveyard was first surveyed by Mrs Mary Margaret Phelan and Mrs Madge Buggy in 1968/69. They described the graveyard as large and containing many monuments buried beneath the soil and therefore difficult to read. At a later date, a local parish committee cleaned and restored the graveyard. The inscriptions were recorded again by Rita Harte and Mrs Phelan with help from the parish committee and published by Kilkenny Archaeological Society in a book edited by Michael O’Dwyer entitled ‘St Patrick’s Kilkenny GRAVESTONE INSCRIPTIONS with historical notes on the parish’. (1992)

St Patrick’s Graveyard has a large collection of medieval tombs. It seems to have been the chief burial place of Archers and other Kilkenny families such as Lanigans, Walshes, Brennans, Phelans, Murphys and Kellys.

Example of some of the beautiful sculpted stones in St. Patrick's Graveyard.
Gravestones built into Boundary Wall

Many of these are medieval (pre 1700) and some of them were recovered from under the ground during the recent restoration. Most of these have been sketched and the drawings are included in the book.

401 Medieval stone, bevelled incised.
402 Medieval stone, in relief, bevelled.
403 Medieval stone, incised end broken.
404 Medieval figure minus head and feet. This is the gravestone of Anastatia Tobin. The Tobins were an old Kilkenny family whose principal home was the Castle of Lyrath. It shows the torso of a woman wearing a long stiffly pleated gown. It dates from the 15th century and has suffered from weathering.
405 Medieval stone, I.H.S. relief TOM above Tudor rose at top.
406 Incised lettering in false relief, bevelled.
407 A small female figure with faint lettering at one side, possibly H. It has a soft folded cloak wrapped around with arms hidden. The face has a very broad nose and plump cheeks possibly indicating a young person.
408 Neo medieval. Right side finished at bevelled edge shaft lopsided base off centre

Erected by Patrick Hickey in memory of his father-in-law John Murphy who died May 3rd 1798 with five of his children who died young
(In script)
May they rest in peace Amen

409 Carrigan describes this stone as “a huge coffin-shaped slab with bevelled edges and incised cross down the centre. The inscription, which is incised in Lombardic, is obliterated at the end and from its position in two parallel lines along the right side of the cross may be taken to commemorate an ecclesiastic.”
410 Medieval stone, lower half missing, incised eight point cross with fleur-de-lis terminal, circular centre with band.
411 Medieval stone, eight point cross with fleur-de-lis terminals.
412 Medieval stone, eight point cross, with wheel centre and four plaits, faint stepped base with scull. Old English inscription in relief around the edge.
413 Probably a medieval slab with the faint mark of a smoothed shaft on the circle end of a cross.
414 A small ringed Latin cross deeply cut in false relief, bevelled edge and fleur-de-lis.
415 Large coffin-shaped slab deeply set in false relief bevelled Latin cross fleur-de-lis, circular centre bevelled.
416 Bevelled incised Latin cross fleur-de-lis terminals.
417 Latin cross in false relief fleur-de-lis terminals bevelled.
418 Latin cross fleur-de-lis terminals recessed bevelled edge.
419 Small bevel edged plain Latin cross on stepped base.
420 Large stone with cross stepped base Maltese cross in centre DB MS at top.
421 Large stone Inscription “Here lies ye bodies of James Englis and Catherine Englis ... July ... 1632” on top of medieval slab with faint cross.

Broken pieces at tree near the entrance gate.
422 Very small stone with IHS lettering very crude almost scratched ......F Shortal.
Fragment of tomb under tree in pile of stones. The rest is attached to the wall of Cleere’s yard in Ormond Road. The fragment has portion of an eight point cross and some words OSTERIS M..... The lower half of a floor slab with a cross down the centre. The inscription is in raised Roman capitals. (see sketch).

A corbel stone with shield shape containing the symbols of the Passion consisting of a cross with a spear down the centre shaft, scurges on each side of centre. Rope at left side and three nails, crown of thorns on right at top. (see sketch).

Small portion of eight pointed cross with angular terminals and words Hoc Octer.

This stone is no longer visible. The following is taken from Carrigan. “Here lies Nicholas Lanigan, burgess of Kilkenny who died ... and his wife Margaret Mentan who died Dec 3rd 1644”.

A floor slab now broken across, the pieces lying apart. The inscription is in raised Roman capitals. “Here lieth James Cleere ... and his wife Joan O’Boe who died 24th July 1647”. (Carrigan). No longer visible.

A very large slab. Portion of lower end is missing. A raised cross ornaments the centre. The inscription in old English characters in relief runs round the top and left edges and is continued on four parallel bands, two at each side of the cross. Date about 1620 (Carrigan). No longer visible. “Here lie David Martin and his son Maurice Martin ... day of the month ... Maurice Martin, burgess of the city of Kilkenny who died ...”

Translation.—[Here lie]

and Patrick Archer, of the same town, merchant, who died the 18th of the month of

A fragment of the upper part of a floor-slab with raised floriated central cross.
To the right of the cross is a shield bearing three lions rampant, two and one, the coat of arms of the Den family, to which, perhaps, the person for whom the monument was originally erected, belonged. The inscription is in raised Old English letters. Date about 1580.
The lower half of a floor-slab with raised cross. The inscription is in old English characters in relief.

Translation.—Here lie of the city of Kilkenny who died July 3rd 1617 and Beale Archer...
Translation.—Here lies the pious virgin, Margaret Archer, Franciscan Tertiary, who died March 13th 1649. Also Rev. Martin Archer who died Nov. 18th 1722.

A floor-slab with raised cross down the centre. The older inscription is in raised, the later in incised and smaller, Roman capitals.

Translation.—Here lies the Rev. Mr. Donogh ̄ Bardaeus ̄ of pious memory, P.P. of St. Patrick’s, Kilkenny, who died June 18th 1621.

A floor-slab with raised cress down centre, the arms being within a circle. The inscription is in Old English characters, in relief. "Bardaeus" is probably the Latinized form of Ward, Hibernice, Mac an Bhaird. This monument, which is in perfect preservation, now serves as a head-stone at some modern grave.
Here lies the body of Patrick Breen who died April the first day, aged 53 years, 1747. Erected by his wife Elinor Breen alias Bowe.

Translation.—[Here lie] John Brown, of the city of Kilkenny, burgess, who died [and his wife] ... rockran who died ... .

A large fragment of a floor-slab. The inscription is in Roman capitals. A cross runs down the centre, which, with the inscription, is in relief. Date, about 1640.
The covering slab has a raised interlaced cross down the centre, but no inscription. The west end panel is missing. The south side panel, ornamented with religious emblems, has been removed and fixed, face outwards, in the wall at the north side of the churchyard. The east end panel is still in situ, and has the sacred monogram I.H.S.
The north side panel is also still in situ, and has carvings of religious emblems; it has, besides, at the east end, a shield bearing the Archer coat of arms, viz. ar. on a chevron gu. between three phons sa. five mullets, and over it the initials M.A., with the date 1580 in the space between both letters. This tomb, there can scarcely be any doubt, was erected by Martin Archer, whose coat of arms, carved in 1582, and still remaining on a slab in the front wall of his house, in High Street, is exactly identical with that on the tomb.
A floor-slab with cross in relief down centre, and raised Old English inscription.
HIC JACENT DANIEL KEATING QVI OBIT [ ]
SCHYCHAN QUE OBIT 5 7HRN. 1643.

ET VXOR EUVS MARGARETA

TRANSLATION.—Here lie Daniel Keating who died [date uncut] and his wife Margaret Sheehan; who died Sept 5th 1643.

A great massive floor-slab with raised cross down the centre, the arms being in a circle. The inscription is in raised Roman capitals.
Hicyn Lovel sit ICI DEV DE ALME CIT MERCI.

AMEN.

Translation.—Allan Louel lies here. God on his soul have mercy. Amen.

Another great coffin-shaped slab. The cross down the centre is in relief. The inscription is in incised Lombardic characters, and is perfect except the first two letters of the Christian name, which are somewhat injured. Like the preceding inscription, it seems, from its position, to commemorate an ecclesiastic.

There are several other monuments in the churchyard, of similar pattern to these, but none of them are inscribed.

is in raised Roman capitals.
Translation.—This monument was made by William Cleere, burgess of Kilkenny, who died and his wife Margaret Cleere otherwise n, who died the of April 1645.

Whoe'er thou art that passest, stand, read, lament.
I am what you will be; I was what you are. Pray for me I beseech you.
Erected to the memory of John Haltigan
by the Nationalists of Kilfennoo who have known him to make a noble sacrifice for which cause British law condemned the informer Naclé consigned him to a bitter fate. He died in his prime at the age of 39 and steadfastly his virtues and patriotism failed to subdue his noble spirit. May his unselfish patriotism imitate until Ireland is once again a nation.
Died 10 July 1884 aged 65 years.
